OVERVIEW

This guide supports students and their mentors who are involved in the extended essay process. It will provide strategies for accessing high quality research resources both within and outside of the Commack High School library. The intention of this document is to satisfy the state Common Core Standards as well as the IB requirements that promote the use of primary and secondary sources as well as the use of multiple authoritative print and digital materials.

As mentioned on page 3 of The Diploma Programme Extended Essay Guide, the extended essay encourages students “to develop the skills of independent research that will be expected at university.” The extended essay encourages students to investigate a topic of their choice, engaging them in a sustained research process. It is intended to promote high-level research and writing skills that will prepare students for college and a future of life-long learning. While conducting independent research students learn problem-solving strategies and gain the ability to gather, synthesize, and analyze pertinent information from multiple authoritative sources.

The Diploma Programme Extended Essay Guide recommends that students should “use the library and consult librarians for advice” throughout the research process (Page 11). Seeking assistance from librarians who are proficient in information literacy will help students engage in a systematic research process, ensuring that they obtain relevant information from a diverse range of sources (page 4). The librarians have an important role from the beginning to the completion of this process. As information specialists, librarians assist with pre-search, help to refine research topics, plan research strategies, and when necessary, assist in revising research topics and questions. Finally, the librarians can assist with accurately citing the sources used.

We hope this guide becomes a useful tool for those engaged in the extended essay research.

Steve Chapman, "Obama's Economic Mythology: Is the Middle Class Really in Decline?" Reason.com, October 30, 2008. Copyright © 2008 by Reason Foundation, 3415 S. Sepulveda Blvd., Suite 400, Los Angeles, CA 90034, www.reason.com. Reproduced by permission.

"Thanks to American capitalism, ordinary workers and families are better off today than they were a decade or a generation ago."

Steve Chapman, a conservative commentator who writes for the Chicago Tribune with syndicated columns appearing in newspapers nationwide, argues in the following viewpoint that while the media and Democrats propagate the message that the middle class is in decline, the opposite is actually true. Instead of facing a decline in wages and lower standards of living, Chapman claims that working Americans and their families are actually earning higher wages than thirty years ago. In addition, he cites data showing that they are spending their money on more goods to improve their living conditions. Chapman acknowledges that some people have lost their jobs in the recent economic upheaval, but maintains a positive outlook on American capitalism's ability to foster growth and economic prosperity for U.S. citizens.

As you read, consider the following questions:

1. According to Chapman's numbers, how many more Wal-Mart stores are open in America today compared with the number open in 1988?
2. What are some of the "fringe benefits" that Chapman claims traditional earnings figures omit?

DRONES

The U.S. has recently used unmanned military aircraft, known as drones, to carry out targeted strikes against suspected terrorists. Some jurisdictions within the U.S. have also looked into using drones to assist law enforcement agencies. The accuracy of drones has been questioned by critics, however, are drones responsible for civilian deaths and injuries in the U.S., or are they an effective way to maintain security both at home and abroad? Green Cities NEW

Neighborhood Garden in Detroit

The world's human population soared past the seven billion mark in 2011. Roughly half of today's global population lives in urban areas, but the proportion of city dwellers is expected to climb to two-thirds by 2050. These population pressures on human settlements, coupled with the warming global climate, are reasons why cities around the world are making sustainability a fundamental objective in the twenty-first century. The movement to create green cities encompasses a variety of public policies and urban planning initiatives designed to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, conserve energy and other natural resources, and improve the quality of urban life. Notifying the School Librarians of Students and their Chosen Topics

It is beneficial to provide the school librarians with a list of topics that will be researched. Although it is the students' responsibility to gather information, the librarians are the resource people who can guide them in the right direction. When the librarians are aware of what topics will be researched, they will be better able to assist with the pre-research process for necessary materials. Some topics will be researched several times over the years, allowing the librarians to house the information in the school library.

Below is a form for the mentors to complete and submit to the librarians, as soon as topics are chosen. This will enable the librarians to prepare for the students' visits to the library.

A box will be available in the library for drop-off.
