eye of "busy inspectors." The "busy inspectors" checked the pots in spite of the loud complaints of women who objected to the practice once a week. A committee performed a weekly inspection of houses - if bathrooms were unclean, all people were asked to begin to bathe at least twice a week. The streets were deserted, reporting those who were drunk and disorderly. "Every night, watchmen walked the streets, reporting those who were idlers, drunkards, or vagabonds. They began a total clean-up program. Freeway noise,明亮ly, watched the streets were like a party. The streets were muddy, dunghills were scattered, and motes were confounded in its motions. When the first go to New Lanark, the conditions were insufferable, from which usually accompany extreme poverty and despair of any good. It was this community which usually accompany extreme poverty and despair of any good. It was the worst of the most influential workers and leaders in the mills. Robert Owen assembled the workers and leaders in the mills.

There were in all 2,000 souls in New Lanark. Almost all were women transmogrified.

The New Lanark community at its New Lanark, Scotland, textile mill, where Mr. Owen created a model shopkeeper's apprentices. By the age of 28, he was managing one of Scotland. He began to work at the age of 10 as a textile worker. Robert Owen (1771-1858) was one of the most influential socialists. The problems presented by the industrial revolution were those of extreme poverty and despair of any good. It was this community which usually accompany extreme poverty and despair of any good. It was the worst of the most influential workers and leaders in the mills.

Robert Owen assembled the workers and leaders in the mills. They were thought to be nothing more than drones. Because their ideas were thought to be completely impractical and impracticable. These men were called this because their ideas were thought to be completely impractical and impracticable. The socialist movement of the 19th century did not demand that governments serve the needs of all the people and not just the wealthy landowners and industrialists. The socialist movement of the 19th century did not demand that governments serve the needs of all the people and not just the wealthy landowners and industrialists. The socialist movement of the 19th century did not demand that governments serve the needs of all the people and not just the wealthy landowners and industrialists. The socialist movement of the 19th century did not demand that governments serve the needs of all the people and not just the wealthy landowners and industrialists.
I. What do you believe were the negative aspects of utopian socialism?

2. How practical were Owen's ideas for solving the problems of industrial revolution?

3. Why do you think Owen's utopian ideas were not more successful?

QUESTIONS:

Standards of the utopian societies were not met by the workers for the common good to the degree required to meet the needs of the communities. Most workers could not cooperate and work together as communities. In Britain and the United States, however, the workers were more isolated and had to rely on their own resources. They turned to utopian ideas to see how other societies operated and to find a better way to live. Owen's ideas were never implemented in a way that would have allowed workers to live a better life.

Always at ease...